GAUNTLET IS THROWN DOWN BY CARRANZA

Expeditionary Force Will Be Resisted
In All But Northern Movement—
Trevino Informs Pershing of Latest Stand Taken By First Chief.

Chihuahua City, Mex., June 16.—Gen. Jacinto Trevino, commanding the Carranza army of the North, today advised Gen. J. J. Pershing, American expeditionary commander, that any movement of American troops from their present lines to the south, east or west, would be considered a hostile act and signal to commence warfare. Gen. Trevino acted upon specific instructions from Carranza.

Pershing Able to Protest His Column, Says Officers.

El Paso, Texas, June 16.—Dispatches from Chihuahua City that Gen. Trevino had notified Gen. Pershing that any movement of his command other than in a northerly direction would be construed as a hostile act, aroused no apprehension among army officials here tonight. It was asserted that the expeditionary command is amply prepared to care for itself in any eventuality.

A compact line of communication extending from the border at Columbus, N. M., to Namiquipa, about 280 miles south, has been drawn during the last few weeks. Large quantities of food, forage, ammunition and other supplies have been concentrated at the field headquarters at Namiquipa and at the field bases of El Valle and Colonia Wublan. It was pointed out also that beyond occasional sorties after marauding bandits, the American troops in Mexico have been inactive for several weeks.

Militia of Every State in the Union
Called Out For Border Patrol Duty

Washington, D. C., June 18.—Virtually the entire mobile strength of the national guard of all states and the District of Columbia were ordered mustered into the Federal service tonight by President Wilson. About 100,000 men are ready to respond to the call. They will be mobilized immediately for such service on the Mexican border as may later be assigned to them. General Frederick Funston, commanding the border forces, will designate the time and place for movements of guardsmen to the international line as the occasion shall require.

In commanding the orders Secretary Baker said the state forces would be employed only to guard the border and that no additional troop movements into Mexico were contemplated except in pursuit of raiders. Simultaneously with the national guard call Secretary Daniels of the navy department ordered additional war vessels to Mexican waters on both coasts to safeguard American lives.

At the War and Navy State Departments it was stated that no new advances as to the situation in Mexico had come to precipitate the new orders. Mobilization of the national guardsmen to support General Funston's line will pave the way for releasing some 30,000 regulars immediately serving in Mexico in the event of open hostilities with the Carranza government. The guardsmen themselves could not be used beyond the line without authority of Congress and until they had volunteered for that duty as they are called out under the old militia law. The new law, which would make them available for duty under the Federal government, goes into effect July 1.

About 50,000 Men on Border
The entire mobile regular army in the United States, several provisional regiments of regular coast artillery serving as infantry and the National Guard of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona now are on the border or in Mexico. Definite figures have never been made public but it is understood that General Funston has about 40,000 regulars and probably 5,000 or more guardsmen, of whom 10,000 regulars are with General Pershing or scattered along his line of communication from Namiquipa, Mexico to Columbus, New Mexico.

Telegrams calling for the militia were sent to the Governors of all states except the three whose guardsmen already have been mustered to after an all day conference at the War Department, attended by Secretary Baker, Major General Scott, chief of staff; Major General Bliss, chief of the mobile army, and Brigadier General Mills, chief of the militia division of the general staff. Brigadier General McCombs, president of the Army War College, also was consulted. Since Mr. Baker did not find it necessary to confer again with President Wilson after his late visit to the White House last night, it was apparent the decision to bring out the militia was reached there.

The new order will put at the disposal of General Funston two major generals and twenty-one brigadier generals of militia with their complete infantry commands.

Wires Are Cut
Nogales, Ariz., June 18.—All telephone and telegraph wires leading from the American to the Mexican side of the border have been cut in Sonora. Americans are being brought to the border in automobiles from Nogales, where an anti-American demonstration occurred today. Carranza authorities previously had refused a train for the refugees.

The arrangement which Gen. Scott arrived at with Obregon is described at Washington as a "gentlemen's agreement." We think there is an error in the grammatical number in this language. So far as Gen. Scott is concerned it is undoubtedly a gentleman's agreement. But as for the Obregon end of it—well, that is a different story.

Belle of Maysville

The most wonderful whisky that ever drove the skeleton from a feast or painted landscapes in the brain of man. It is the mingled souls of wheat and corn. In it you will find the sunshine and the shadow that chased each other over the billowy fields; the breath of June; the carol of the lark; the dews of night; the wealth of summer; and Autumn's rich content—all golden with imprisoned light.

Drink it, and you will hear the voices of men and maidens singing the "Harvest Home" mingled with the laughter of children. Drink it, and you will feel within your blood the star-lit dawns, the dreamy, tawny dusks of many perfect days. For many years this liquid joy has been confined within the happy staves of oak, longing to touch the lips of man.

WAR AND THE MAN

(By M. Collingway.)

One wonders at times what will be the result of this war on the characters of the men who have gone through it.

No end of predictions are being concocted on the general changes in social and economic conditions that will occur when the war is over. But what of the far far more interesting and human study—the change in the men themselves? No man can go through the struggle and come out the same. Some are etched more deeply than others, naturally; some were professional soldiers before, and to them the game, though infinitely more terrible than their previous experiences, was not quite new. But what of all the others—the lawyers, the doctors, the artists, the clerks, the writers, the stockbrokers, all of them taken suddenly from the placid, everyday sedentary life and pitched into the Great Adventure?

Will it make them manlier or simply tougher? Will they be able to settle down to the deadening monotony of the old routine, the same old train in the morning, the same stuffy office, the conventional amusements, the same train back home? One has read so much—one has understood so little.

Here is a conversation that shows the contrast of normal, ordinary life in England against war life in France.

Passing Vane, the stockbroker's, house the other evening I suddenly heard a hail:

"Come in and have a gargle. I've just got back on short leave."

"Good," I answered. "Mrs. Vane must be pleased." We strolled up the drive, and in through the door. "You're looking very fit, old man. Flanders seems to suit you."

"My dear fellow, it does. It's the goods. I never knew what living was before. The thought of that cursed office makes me tired—and—and once"—he shrugged his shoulders—"it filled my life. Say when."

"Cheer up!" We clinked glasses. "I thought you were taking a commission."

"I am—very shortly. The Colonel has recommended me for one, and I gather the powers that be approve. But in a way I'm sorry, you know. I've got a great pal in my section—who kept a whelk stall down in White-chapel. I assure you, my dear chap, that fellow spins a yarn better than any society raconteur I've ever met. Garnished a little, a trifle full-bodied and spicy—but still, que voulez-vous?"

He was looking reminiscently into the fire from the depths of an armchair and pulling luxuriously at his pipe. Suddenly he gave a short laugh.

"To show you the type of fellow he is. About a week ago we were up in the trenches—bored stiff, and yet happy in a way, you know, when Master Boche started to register—that is, to find out the exact range of our bit of Mother Earth by dropping shells there. I suppose it was a new battery or something, but they were using crumps, not shrapnel; I mean, it was a howitzer firing stuff that exploded on impact, not a field gun firing shrapnel that explodes in the air. They weren't very big, but they were very close—and they got closer. You hear a nasty droning noise, then there's the hell of an explosion—a great column of blackish yellow smoke rises, and the bits ping through the air overhead. Well, he got a bracket; by that I mean the first one was 50 yards short of the trench and the second was a hundred yards over. Then he started to come back—always in the same line; and the line passed straight through our bit of the trench.

"Ere! What yer doing, you perisherers? Sargint, go and stop 'em. Tell 'em I've been appointed purveyor of winkles to the Royal 'Ouse of the 'Un Emperor."

"Our friend of the whelk stall was surveying the scene with intense disfavor. A great mass of smoke belched up from the ground 20 yards away and he ducked instinctively. Then we waited—15 seconds, about, was the interval between shots. The men were a bit white about the gills, and—well, the feeling in the pit of my tummy was what is known as wobbly. Then it came and we cowered. There was a roar like nothing on earth—the back of the trench collapsed and the whole lot of us were buried. If the shell had been five yards short it would have burst in the trench and my whelk friend would have whelked no more."

Vane replenished his drink and laughed. "We emerged plucking mud from our mouths and cursed. The man apparently was satisfied and stopped. The only person who wasn't satisfied was the purveyor of winkles to the Royal 'Ouse. He brooded through the day, but toward the evening he became more cheerful."

"Look 'ere," he said to me, 'ave you ever killed a 'Un'?"

"I think I did once," I said, 'a fat man with a nasty face'."

"Oh, you 'ave, 'ave you? Well, what abaht killing one tonight? If they think I'm going to stand that sort of thing they're—wrong! The language was the language of White-chapel, but the sentiments were the sentiments of even the most rabid purist of speech.

"To cut a long story short, we went. We warned 'em in the trench and we scrambled over the parapet—out into No Man's Land. And we were very lucky."

"We ran into three of 'em, creeping about half way between the trenches. My fish friend spotted them first and chuckled horribly. Gad, man!" Vane's pipe was out and he was glaring up at me. "I never knew what life was till that moment. He cracked the skull of one with the butt of his rifle, and I got my bayonet into another. To think of it—alone in the blackness of the night; to feel the steel go in, to hear the guttural curse of fear—to know that, man to man, one had beaten them. Life—great heavens—it was perfect, utter bliss."

Then came the interruption. "Dear," said a voice at the door, "the children are in bed. Will you go up and say good-night?"

For a moment there was absolute silence in the room. And then Vane laughed shortly, a little harshly. "Of course, dear, I'll go at once." He rose and finished his drink. "I'm afraid I've been talking a lot of hot air, old boy."

"Not a bit," I answered; "you've interested me enormously."

He had—but the contrast had interested me still more. And what is going to be the result?

PRAISE

Is Given Roosevelt By Financial Leaders For Refusing Nomination—Henry P. Davidson Says United Party Should Beat Wilson.

New York, June 17—Henry P. Davidson in a paragraph characteristically concise compacts what appears to be the prevailing view in the financial district of the presidential outlook, excepting that it is not the view of those who favor the re-election of President Wilson. Mr. Davidson believes that thorough co-operation is to be established between the Republican and Progressive parties, and that if it is established it will be likely to defeat President Wilson in the November election. Mr. Davidson also said a word or two of Colonel Roosevelt, asserting that the latter's action means much not only to the United States but to the world at large. It reveals patriotism of the highest quality.

While, of course, the overwhelming financial and commercial interest occasioned by the European war and the great wave of prosperity which now covers the entire United States compels absorbing interest among the leaders in the financial district, nevertheless they do turn aside for a moment or two to speak of presidential politics.

There appears to have been some change of political opinion in the financial district since the campaign of 1912. Many of the leaders at that time favored the election of Governor Woodrow Wilson for President. The friction which caused cleavage in the Republican party four years ago split the Republicans of the financial district. Something like apathy prevailed there among them, partly because they regarded it as sure as anything in politics would be that Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, would be chosen President of the United States.

Although there does not appear now to be quite as visible a sentiment in favor of President Wilson's election as prevailed four years ago, nevertheless mention is always made of his pre-eminent service in persuading Congress to enact legislation which created our modernized banking system and the Federal Reserve Board.

Federal Reserve Helped.

The leaders in international financing have often said that the fortunate establishment of the Federal Reserve Board—and by a remarkable coincidence a few weeks after the beginning of the European war—has done more than any other influence to enable American financiers and the banking world of the United States to meet successfully the new and absolutely original problem which the war developed.

For a year and a half a change has been observed in the attitude of many of the leaders in the financial district toward Colonel Roosevelt. It was strikingly manifested when Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, which is the banking representative of the Standard Oil Company, spoke for publication a few days ago in favor of the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt by the Republicans. So it has been asked who would have ventured the prediction four years ago that the great forces of the Standard Oil Company would be found in 1916 recommending the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt by the Republicans?

If Colonel Roosevelt should hear, as the undoubtedly will, what the leaders in the financial district are saying about what they call his patriotic action last week, these comments should perhaps compensate to some extent for whatever disappointment he may have had, if any, in the results at Chicago.

Lawyers in the financial district have nothing but praise for the professional and intellectual qualifications of former Justice Charles E. Hughes.

There was, however, considerable doubt until the day of the nomination whether or not Justice Hughes would accept the nomination. His professional brothers in New York knew that his place upon the bench of the Supreme Court was most satisfactory to him—congenial to his temperamental as well as to his intellectual qualities.

Is Clear Thinker

One of the remarks commonly made when Mr. Hughes's mental capacities are under discussion is that he possesses an unusual power for clear thinking as well as a remarkable gift for expressing even abstruse thoughts in concise, perfectly clear and very felicitous English speech. There has been no President, excepting Lincoln, whose mental capacities surpass or even equal those of Mr. Hughes in this respect.

The late John Clinton Gray, who was for many years Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals at Albany, said at the time of Governor Hughes's appointment by President Taft as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court at Washington that no lawyer had ever argued before the Court of Appeals more effectively than Governor Hughes when he was in active practice. His legal expositions were marvels of clearness and might be studied as good examples of lucid expression of abstract thought. It seemed, however, to Justice Gray that if Hughes had any weakness, intellectually or professionally, it was his over-elaboration of minor points at issue, so that in his arguments these appeared to be of as great consequence as the one which seemed to the Justices to be the single issue of importance.

There are many business men in the United States who can repeat from memory the substance of the speech delivered by Governor Hughes at Youngstown, Ohio, at the beginning of the presidential campaign of 1908. That speech is still regarded as the best exposition of the proper relation which should be maintained on the one hand between business and the public and on the other hand between the public and business.

In his career Mr. Hughes has been singularly fortunate. Fortuitous circumstances for which he has been responsible several times aided him. He probably would still be practicing law in New York had he not been appointed counsel for the Legislative Committee which was authorized to investigate the life insurance companies of New York City. He would not have been appointed had another than he accepted the offer first made by the committee. This offer was first made to James M. Beck, who was compelled to decline it because he was at the time acting as private or personal counsel to the President of one of the life insurance companies.

DANGERS OF MOST FLY POISONS

In Farm and Fireside is an article telling of the dangers to human beings in many fly poisons.

Most of them contain arsenic—a deadly and rapid poison. In view of the extent to which such poison is kept in saucers about many houses during fly time, let us bear in mind that the past two years seventy-two cases are on record of children being poisoned by playfully drinking the contents of saucers set out for flies.

"Some of the children died, but most of them, having prompt medical treatment, recovered. Michigan now has a law regulating the sale of fly poisons. But a matter of this kind is often successfully coped with if the attention of intelligent people is simply called to the danger. We are not condemning fly poisons, but simply urge care in keeping them out of the reach of youngsters."

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING

York, Pa.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be all you say it is. I was so sick that I could not stand at my sink to wash dishes and I could not sit without a pillow under me. I had the doctor every few days but since I have taken the Compound I don't have to send for him. I have had three children and could not raise any of them, but since I have taken the Compound I have a bright baby boy. I advise every suffering woman to try it and get relief. It has done wonders for me."—Mrs. CATHERINE GOODLING, 138 E. King Street, York, Pa.

When a medicine has been successful in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it. "I do not believe it will help me." There must be more than a hundred thousand women in this country who, like Mrs. Goodling, have proven what wonders Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can do for weak and ailing women. Try it and see for yourself.

CHAUTAUQUA SCENES REMIND US THAT DATES FOR BIG WEEK ARE ALMOST AT HAND

1. Children's hour at a Redpath Chautauqua. Each morning and afternoon during the local program there will be sessions under the supervision of a competent "story girl." 2. Chautauqua tent staked and ready for raising. Crew men are underneath, tugging at the ropes which pull the heavy canvas into place. In the background is the Y. W. C. A. building which adjoins the Chautauqua grounds at Youngstown, O. 3. One of the best features of children's work at the Chautauqua is the training in folk drills under the supervision of the "story girl." In this picture the girls are shown in the midst of one of their daily exercises. 4. Tent crew and superintendent at an Ohio Chautauqua. The Redpath tent men are chosen from various colleges in states where the circuit is operated. One young man is gatekeeper, another is property man, a third is electrician and head usher, and a fourth is cashier. The superintendent, or platform manager, is the Chautauqua's guiding force. 5. An afternoon crowd leaving the Chautauqua tent. All ages and classes are represented, for it is to all ages and classes that the Chautauqua appeals. 6. "Story girl" in Indian costume, interesting the children at an afternoon meeting of the Junior Chautauquans. The stories this summer are to be entirely different from those previously used. 7. The gateman is an important member of the Chautauqua crew. His post is beside the green ticket can which is so familiar at the entrance to the Chautauqua grounds.

HAVE YOU BEEN SWINDLED BY THIS TRICK?

"A so-called co-operative organization," says Farm and Fireside, "offers automobile owners the opportunity to secure standard makes of tires, supplies, and various accessories at exceedingly low prices. First you must join the association, which is done by paying an annual fee of $10. Then you receive a catalogue which is similar to the catalogues of prominent accessory houses, but it contains a discount sheet quoting prices in some cases lower than the cost of manufacture."

"But when you send in your order for the standard goods listed you receive a reply that they are 'just out of those goods, and you are urged to purchase an unknown brand which they carry. The joker in the whole scheme is a little clause in the contract which says that they will furnish the standard goods 'when in stock.'"

"Many representatives of one of these organizations in Canada were tried on the charge of fraud, and pleaded guilty. The American Automobile Association reports the existence of similar associations in this country."

POSITIVE PROOF

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Maysville

Because it's the evidence of a Maysville citizen.
Testimony easily investigated.
The strongest endorsement of merit.
The best proof. Read it:
Mrs. Della Luneford, 328 E. Front St., Maysville, says: "I attribute kidney trouble to a strain. I had sharp, shooting pains through my kidneys and a dragging-down feeling through my hips. I had dull headaches and dizzy spells and often if I had not caught hold of something for support, I would have fallen. I was in that condition for several years, up one week and in bed the next. I finally began to notice symptoms of dropsy. My feet began to swell and my hands were at times the same way. Finally, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

OVER THREE YEARS LATER Mrs. Luneford said: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely and permanently cured me and I am glad to confirm all I said in their praise before."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the name that Mrs. Luneford has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

NEW METHOD OF MAKING ANTI-HOG-CHOLERA SERUM

Washington, D. C.—A new method of preparing anti-hog-cholera serum, which permits the economical production of a clear sterilized product, has just been described in the Journal of Agricultural Research of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The advantage claimed for the new method is that it makes possible the production of an anti-hog-cholera serum which can be quickly sterilized by heat to a point that will absolutely kill any germs of foot-and-mouth disease and so yield a serum that is absolutely safe even if taken from a hog which might harbor foot-and-mouth disease and yet give no indication of being infected.

The method, as described by its discoverers, Dr. Marion Dorset and R. R. Henley, of the Biochemic Division, Bureau of Animal Industry, consists in adding a slight amount of an extract from ordinary white navy beans to the defibrinated hog-cholera-immune blood which has been the form of the serum used in the past. The addition of this bean extract causes the red cells of the blood to agglutinate and when the mixture is whirled on a centrifuge the red cells pack together and form a rather stiff jelly-like mass. It is then possible to pour off a clear serum, leaving behind the red cells which play no part in preventing hog cholera and which in fact simply tend to dilute the serum and render its sterilization by heat impracticable. To increase the yield of clear serum the discoverers added a small amount of ordinary salt and found that they obtained from 70 to 74 per cent of clear serum. The clear serum thus obtained it was found could be heated for 30 minutes at a temperature of 60 degrees Centigrade without changing its consistency or lessening in any way its effectiveness in preventing hog cholera. The heating to this point for this time is more than sufficient to kill any germs of foot-and-mouth disease which might accidentally be present. Practical tests with hogs show that probably all of the antibodies useful in combating hog cholera were retained in the serum and the red cells extracted contained so few, if any, of these valuable bodies as to make the residue of red cells useless in preventing the disease.

Before the clear serum was developed, many attempts were made to sterilize by heat in a practicable way the ordinary defibrinated blood. It was found, however, that heating the old product up to 60 degrees Centigrade resulted in more or less complete coagulation of the defibrinated blood and in the destruction of the serum so far as its commercial worth is concerned. It was found that the highest temperature that could be used was 50 degrees Centigrade and it was necessary to keep the old serum at this temperature for 12 hours to make certain that the virus of foot-and-mouth disease was killed. Heating serum at a steady temperature over this long period in ordinary practices is difficult and too expensive.

Attempts also were made to make a clear serum by centrifugalizing. It was found, however, that while the centrifuge would separate to some extent the red cells, they were in such shape that it was difficult to separate the serum completely. An important quantity of antibodies were left behind in the red cells, and the resulting product was a cloudy rather than a clear serum. With this process, moreover, it was possible ordinarily to secure only about 50 per cent of serum. Under the new method it is possible to secure as high as 74 per cent of clear serum, which in actual test has proved to be fully potent. This clear serum, moreover, can be completely sterilized in 30 minutes, whereas the old serum had to be heated steadily for 12 hours.

The new form of serum, as far as the Department knows is not yet being made or put on sale by the commercial serum laboratories. As this process was discovered by the Federal government, any one in the United States is free to use it.

MOVIE FACTS OF INTEREST

Anita Stewart, before the screen debut, appeared on the covers of the popular magazines, having been a model for prominent artists.

Lillian Walker was a telephone operator and an end in the "Follies" and her lines—now silent ones—have been busy ever since.

Richard Buhler used to "sling" soda in a Washington drug store.

Baby Jean Frazer is called "Steve" by her father because when she came he was expecting a boy.

Henry B. Walthall, "The Mansfield of the Movies," studied law, went to war and began in the pictures as a ditch digger.

Earle Williams was a phonograph salesman, when he had to talk for a living.

Edna Mayo is an expert sculptor, painter, swimmer and rifle shot.

Kathlyn Williams would much rather play with a wild tiger than with a cat or a dog.

William Gillette took special courses in the University of New Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Boston University before setting out to conquer the drama.

George Cooper went into the "movies" when he lost his beautiful tenor voice while with Fiske O'Hara.

Naomi Childers wants to appear in comedies, but her "boss" won't allow it because she is too good in drama.

Marguerite Clayton was brought up in a convent.

Charles Richman likes the pictures so well he doesn't care if he never returns to the spoken drama.

Richard Travers is a doctor, a soldier of fortune, a warrior and a man about the town, and was brought up in the great North which he pictures so well.

Guy Oliver was a cub reporter.

Lewis S. Stone was a soldier, cow puncher, big-game hunter, sailor and college graduate.

"FLUNKING" A DISTASTE
(Princeton Cor. New York Herald)

A "sublime indifference for the future" is the name of a disease which afflicts most students who "flunk out" of Princeton University, according to a statement by the Board of Student Editors today.

To instill into the adolescent mind a proper regard for the future it is proposed to weed out the "insurables" by frequent examinations and to limit the courses to be taken by those students who are afflicted by the disease, as it is called, but who are able to just squeeze through the "exams."

KAVALA, GRECE

Washington, D. C.—Kavala, the walk-ed Aegean seaport for Seres, the commercial center of northeast Macedonia, is the subject of today's geography bulletin prepared by the National Geographic Society at its Washington headquarters.

Concerning this historically interesting town of 5,000 people which is situated on the mainland across the Bay of Kavala from the island of Thasos, and which is connected by rail with Salonika, the bulletin says:

"The ships frequent Kavala for cargoes of the finest Turkish tobacco in the world approach the docks from both the east and west for the town is built on a promontory which juts southward into the bay. The port is 80 miles in an air line northeast of Salonika and is about 250 miles west of Constantinople. In the summertime its population is more than doubled by the influx of peasants who find employment in curing and packing the tobacco for which America and Europe paid more than $6,000,000 annually before the war."

"Whatever may be its role in the present encroachment of the Bulgarians on Grecian territory, Kavala's place in modern history is secure as the birthplace of Mehmet Ali, the remarkable son of an Albanian farmer whose career as viceroy of Egypt during the first half of the 19th century almost precipitated Europe into a war of nations such as is now being fought on battlefields throughout the world. The house in which this witty, wily pasha was born in 1769 is in a narrow, crooked street not far from the Turkish school which he founded, although he himself never learned to read or write."

"It was during Mehmet Ali's activities, from 1830 to 1841, as a rebel vassal of the Ottoman sultan, that Russia, Turkey, Prussia, Austria, England and France were kept on the verge of war in their determination to prevent a disturbance of the 'balance of power' on the continent. During this perilous period the ambitious pasha, who had made himself master of Egypt by a massacre of the Mamelukes, was the crux of the Egyptian Question, and his claims to overlordship of Syria, and his son Ibrahim was constantly operating with a well-trained army, gave rise to international complications which for a decade taxed the diplomatic resources of Metternich, Palmerston, Thiers, Ponsonby and Guizot."

"In Roman days Kavala was known as Neapolis, and it was here that St. Paul landed on his way from Samothrace to Philippi, where there was a thriving colony of Christians to whom the Epistle to the Philippians was addressed. Prior to the beginning of the Christian era Neapolis was the seaport of Philippi, whose ruins are to be found some ten miles from shore, on the highway from Kavala to Thessaly. Here the fleet of Brutus and Cassius was at anchor during the famous conflict on the fields of Philippi in 42 B. C., when the assassins of Julius Caesar met defeat at the hands of the legions commanded by Anthony and Octavius."

"Philippi was named for Philip II of Macedonia, father of Alexander the Great, and was originally known as Crenides (Fountain). It owed its importance to the proximity of the bill of Dionysius, where Philip had made himself master of valuable gold mines.

Practically all that remains to connect ancient Neapolis with modern Kavala is a Roman aqueduct whose two-tier arches still convey water from Mt. Pangaea to the town and citadel."

"THE TANGLED WEB"

Marriage stripped of romance is really only a civil contract. Unlike other civil contracts it does not end when one party violates it or when it is brought about by fraud. Redress can be secured only by a Court action. The non-loyal view of marriage is vividly presented in "The Tangled Web", one of the tremendously startling "Who's Guilty?" to be shown at the Pastime today. Heinie and Louie in a reel of fun. A Pathe scene travel picture in colors and Pathe's Weekly completes an excellent program.

BIG FEATURE AT THE GEM TODAY

"The Green Cloak," is the title of George Kleine's latest dramatic masterpiece. The story features Irene Fenwick and is filmed from the stage play of that name by Owen Davis and Henry K. Webster. Miss Fenwick does some extraordinary work in the role of Ruth McAllister, a girl accused of the murder of her husband. The entire film sparkles with dramatic situations and tense moments. It will be seen at the Gem theater today. Also Charlie Chaplin in the two-reel feature "Work."
